The Brussels Design Museum is a space dedicated to design from the 20th and 21st centuries.

It was established after the Atomium's acquisition of the Plasticarium collection in December 2014. The Brussels Design Museum offers an innovative and surprising insight on plastic design from the fifties to the present (permanent exhibition / Plasticarium Collection) and on other forms of design through other periods, expressions, materials and themes (temporary exhibitions).

The museum, it is also an auditorium for about 400 people and an educational and cultural service with activities designed for children, teens and school groups. Lectures and screenings, in connection with the themes that are explored, enrich the museum's program of activities.

Through exhibitions, guided tours, workshops and lectures, the Brussels Design Museum aims to ensure that design is intelligible to one and all.
